

Alexandria Gazette

THURSDAY EVENING, APRIL 26.

LAMAR'S TERRIBLE REBUKE.—During the exciting debate over the army bill in June 1880, Mr. Conkling made a speech of half an hour's length with his customary force and eloquence, and denounced the democrats for forcing political legislation upon appropriation bills. The particular item he opposed was an amendment to the army bill prohibiting the use of military force to keep peace at the polls. He charged that the Southern democrats had been guilty of violence and murder in order to carry the elections. Mr. Lamar arose and replied:

"It is not my purpose to indulge in personalities, but I will say to the Senator from New York that if he intended to intimate that I have done what he accuses the people of my section of doing, I pronounce his statement a falsehood, and repel it with all the unmitigated contempt I feel for its author."

Mr. Conkling, who had started toward the clock room, stopped when he heard these words, and asked if the Senator from Mississippi had imputed to him any intentional misstatements. Mr. Lamar repeated what he had said. Then Conkling, standing in the rear of the desks, remarked in frigid tones:

"I understood the Senator to say in plain and unperiphrastic language that the statement of mine to which he refers is a falsehood. If I get his words right I have only to say, without any desire to violate the rules of the Senate, or the proprieties that are recognized among gentlemen, that if the Senator from Mississippi did impute or intended to impute to me a falsehood, nothing except the rules of the Senate would prevent me from denouncing him as a liar and a blackguard. Let me be more specific. Should the member from Mississippi, except in the presence of the Senate, charge me with falsehood in what I said, I would denounce him as a blackguard, a coward, and a liar."

Mr. Lamar.—The Senator from New York understood me correctly. I did use precisely those words and with a full knowledge of their meaning. Though harsh, though severe, my terms were such as no good man would deserve and no brave man would wear."

Mr. Conkling addressed the chair and asked: "Mr. President, what is the question before the Senate?"

The Senate sat all night and there was rumor that a duel would take place between the two men at daylight. Mr. Lamar did consult with his friends, who advised him not to send a challenge, as Conkling would be likely to do so, but if he received one to accept it. Mr. Conkling told me that night that he would not send a challenge, and that he would not accept one. He had a repugnance to dueling and would never countenance it.—Wash.
